Abstract

This research focuses on the study of the Kaṭha Upaniṣad text and its implementation in social life. The Kaṭha Upaniṣad is one of the important books among the other Upanishad books. This book also contains many teachings of Hindu theology and divine philosophy. Ātman and Brahman are important discussions in the Kaṭha Upaniṣad. The philosophical side of the Kaṭha Upaniṣad is closely related to human concepts and the way of life to be free from suffering. The Kaṭha Upaniṣad offers a unique perspective by understanding the main character of mankind, namely Ātman (God within oneself). The most tangible context of the Kaṭha Upaniṣad teachings can be seen in the Sai Study Group (SSG) Denpasar. Sai Baba’s discourses do not indeed refer to the Kaṭha Upaniṣad as the main reference, but every activity at the Sai Study Group Denpasar has an alignment with the Vedic teachings.

INTRODUCTION

The implementation of the Vedic teachings in the midst of society is certainly not separated from the element of spirituality. The current dynamics of technology has led to skepticism about the truth of religion and has made people far from God. Especially, in the current technological era, it is increasingly getting worse. Since 2011, the use of the internet of things is a sign that the digital age has shifted towards the era of the Industrial Revolution 4.0 up to now.

The current progress in the field of science and technology has generated various facilities for humanity in the fields of health, communication, and almost every aspect of this life. However, behind this progress, there is still a dialectical struggle involving the object of a very fundamental question about the existence of all living entities. It is a question that always disturbs human reasoning and opposes positivistic ideology to answer it. In history, modernism has emerged as a progressive force that promises human liberation from the chains of backwardness. However, observing the phenomenon that occurs at this time, humans actually reach the peak of their turmoil.

The presence of the social-spiritual movement aims to restore morality in the midst of social life in an effort to apply the values and teachings of Vedas. This effort is certainly not just in a discourse level, but rather a social practice in the form of service and dedication. As an effort to form a character based on the spirit of Vedas, it seems that it has not been well received by various parties. The emergence of organizations which aim to instill morality and social services inspired by Vedas seems to still have dynamics and contestation. Especially with the discourse of “Back to Vedas” pioneered by some Hindu figures in Bali around 2010, the religious atmosphere in Bali had experienced tension.

Actually, religious life should understand the principle of ‘Unity in Diversity’ which is a part of human right. The teachings of religion should be implemented correctly through a holistic understanding. The Vedic teachings must be implemented in real life. Generally, the culmination of the Vedic teachings as mandated in the Upaniṣad is behavior and morality in social practice. This also applies in the Sai Study Group (SSG) Denpasar, a social-spiritual organization in Denpasar. This then draws attention to trace the existence of the organization of the Sai Study Group (SSG) Denpasar.

According to Jendra (2013: 15-25), the emergence of social-spiritual movements in Bali such as the Sai Study Group has existed before 1979 by followers of Bhagavan Sri Sathya Sai Baba. The existence of these followers became the forerunner to the establishment of the Sai Study Group in Bali under the name the Sai Study Group (SSG) Denpasar. The organization, which was later called the Sai spiritual movement, was confined in the area of the non-profit social-spiritual organization. Sai Study Group Indonesia (SSGI) is an umbrella for various Sai Centers in Indonesia. This movement seems to exist to do activities in three wings, namely spiritual, social, and service. Spirituality becomes the “spirit” in all of its activities. The existence of this organization is then considered to bring a new understanding of different ideological constellations in the midst of Balinese culture. This obviously has an impact on potential friction or otherwise, it may escalate harmony or create various effects on the cultural level (Budiasa, 2015).

Apart from those constellations, other tendencies lead to the marginalization of the followers of this organization. By observing the situation in general, each organization surely has certain social goals and motives. In general, all organizations engaged in non-profit social spiritual sector clearly will have social motives for selfless service. This fact becomes more interesting to explore if the followers of the Sai spiritual movement (the bhakta of Sai) become marginalized in the midst of Balinese culture. How could it be the noble Balinese culture with such high tolerance spirit makes fanaticism in the midst of the diversity of Hindus? Enthusiasm in committing selfless service especially for social interests should certainly be appreciated.

According to Budiasa (2015: 110), the rejection of the Sai spiritual movement occurred in 2004. This triggered a communicative action carried out by followers of Sai spiritual movement towards those who rejected the ideology of Sai. The turbulent caused the bhakta of Sai to be less accepted in social activities, but in the end, they could be received well until the present day. It is proved by the increasing number of the Sai Study Group (Sai Center) which currently comes to 40 Sai Centers in Bali. However, until the present day, there are still reactions from people who consider this organization as an organization of belief. Moreover, there are still people who consider this spiritual movement as a movement which is incompatible with Hinduism.

The issue which makes this research highly interesting is the study of the implementation of Hinduism values, especially the Upaniṣad text as the basis of Brahma Vidya knowledge (divinity or Hindu theology) on the presence of the Sai Study Group in Bali. Therefore, the SSG Denpasar was then chosen as the object of the research because it was considered the oldest Sai Center and was the forerunner of the development of the Sai organization in Bali. In addition, the activities conducted at the SSG Denpasar were allegedly related to the Upaniṣad teachings, one of them was the Kaṭha Upaniṣad. The teachings of morality with the understanding of the oneness of God through the explanation of the soul and the effort to take liberation through the spiritual path contained in the Kaṭha Upaniṣad are considered to have a related connection with the work program at the SSG Denpasar.
Among the Upaniṣad texts, the researcher had chosen the Kaṭha Upaniṣad text as a central issue in this study.

This research focused on the study of the Kaṭha Upaniṣad text to find the structure of its theology teachings and divine philosophy. After that, the results of the study were used to see the phenomenon in the SSG Denpasar. This study applied the literature structural theory by Roman Jakobson to observe the structure of the theological teachings of Kaṭha Upaniṣad. The hermeneutic theory by Hans-Georg Gadamer was used to analyze elements of divine philosophy in every Kaṭha Upaniṣad discourse through procedural hermeneutics. The semiotic theory by Ferdinand De Saussure was used to uncover and to match the patterns of the Sai ideology with the divine philosophy of the Kaṭha Upaniṣad. The minor theory of symbolic interactionalism by Herbert Blumer was used to explain the internalization of the divine philosophical values of the Kaṭha Upaniṣad in the activities of the SSG Denpasar. The type of this research is textual (text and context) research. The applied data collection method was gathering literature, observation, and interviews.

DISCUSSION

1. The Structure of Theology Teachings in the Kaṭha Upaniṣad Text

   The structure of theology teachings in the Katha Upaniṣad text begins with an understanding of the unity between guru and student as one of the requirements to reveal the secrets of God’s truth. The initial mantra in the Kaṭha Upaniṣad becomes one of the important proofs that a meeting between guru and students is not a static relationship. The meeting between Naciketas and Lord Yama in the Kaṭha Upaniṣad advises that people should seek a true guru who can lead them to the path of truth. The guru in the Kaṭha Upaniṣad means Ātman which is within oneself. The Kaṭha Upaniṣad advises people to always listen to Ātman as the Guru and savior from the circle of life and death. In other words, strong and deep-rooted beliefs must be instilled in someone’s self before they learn the teachings of kawisesan or Brahma Widya (divinity).

   After describing the importance of self-confidence, the first discourse discusses the teachings of Brahma Widya (divinity). There are four basic things in the explanation of Lord Yama to Naciketas regarding the knowledge of divine teachings, namely: 1) God as the Acintya (unthinkable). Lord Yama explains Om kara is the highest goal of the Vedic scriptures. Based on Donder’s concept (2010: 35), God in Nirguna Brahman state is God who does not have any form. Humans cannot imagine or focus their thoughts on something that is not tangible so that symbols, marks, or signs appear. In other words, God in the Nirguna Brahman state is a state in which God does not manifest itself in any form. In this case, the discourse about God who is unthinkable can be symbolized with Om kara; 2) God as the One. The concept of divinity in the Kaṭha Upaniṣad begins with the disclosure of Om as a substance that shows God in the actual state. This tendency refers to Nirguna Brahman. Furthermore, the Kaṭha Upaniṣad expresses two ātman as the existing reality. Lord Yama says there are two types of atman, namely immanent and transcendent ātman. This interpretation indicates that God includes inside and outside of his creation. Those two ātman are one, identical, and similar. Therefore, Brahman and Ātman are an absolute unity of the One. There is no difference between God’s consciousness which includes all elements of His creation; 3) God as the source of all. The text of Kaṭha Upaniṣad, I.2.12 clearly says that “One, the ruler of all, the atman of all things, who makes himself single become plural, to the wise man who understands that he dwells in the jīva for those the eternal joy (ananda) and not to others (Radhakrishnan, 2008: 497)”; 4) God as who are in everywhere. The text of Kaṭha Upaniṣad, I.2.9 explains that “Like one fire, when entering this world it turned into various forms according to the object (which is burned), likewise this atman it turns into various forms according to (what he enters), and also remain outside of all (Radhakrishnan, 2008: 496)”.

Jurnal Penelitian Agama Hindu. 114
The next structure of theological teachings is about the basics of achieving God’s consciousness. The Kaṭha Upaniṣad teaches the deep self-surrender and realizing the nature of self thoroughly. The determination of those two definitions can be said as Bhakti and Yoga. Bhakti is devotion while Yoga is self-control.

The subsequent structure of the theological teachings relates to salvation and the path to liberation. According to the Kaṭha Upaniṣad, the path to liberation is called Sreyas (path of virtue). The text of Kaṭha Upaniṣad, I.2.2 says: śreyaś ca preyaś ca manusyaṃ etas tau sampaṛīṭya vīvinakti dhīraḥ. sreyaḥ hi śīrarchicalṃ vṛṣṇe, preyaḥ mando yogo-kṣemād vṛṣṇe (Kaṭha Upaniṣad, I.2.2). Meaning: “Both virtue and enjoyment approach people. The wise are those who after considering carefully they are able to differentiate both things. The wise will choose virtue rather than enjoyment. Meanwhile, the fool will choose enjoyment for reasons of worldly pleasure (Radhakrishnan, 2008: 473)”.

2. Divine Philosophy in the Kaṭha Upaniṣad Text

According to Tjahyadi (2007), divine philosophy generally describes the thoughts about God with the approach of common senses which is later called philosophy. Therefore, the presentation of the analysis results of divine philosophy in the Kaṭha Upaniṣad text begins from the framework of Gadamer’s hermeneutics theory. The hermeneutic theory by Gadamer declares that the text interpretation does not only concern the symbolic meaning that surrounds the text but also touch other aspects of life such as arts, humanism, social, and others (Zaid, 2004: 4).

The Kaṭha Upaniṣad as a literary work is a reflection towards the investigation of God in the past. Therefore, the discourse that became the central point in this work is the existence of God. In general, the Kaṭha Upaniṣad views God as an impersonal God which has similarities with entities that possess all living things (Ātma). However, the entities cannot know the truth because it is blocked by the virtual element, namely the prakerti / material. Therefore, it clearly indicates that God’s reality consists of two elements, namely Brahman and Ātman. Those tendencies can be interpreted as: 1) God as the Brahman, namely absolute transcendent reality or Impersonal God; 2) God as the Ātman, namely the spark of God in a living entity; 3) Brahman and Ātman are similar, Ātman is identical with Brahman, The One and Only, because Ātman is the smallest part of Brahman.

Based on the synthesis of the Ātman-Brahman above, it can be concluded that the divine philosophy in the Kaṭha Upaniṣad text leads to the understanding of Advaita Vedanta. According to Sankaracarya in Vireswarananda (2004: 53), Advaita Vedanta or non-dualism philosophy provides a review about Ātman-Brahman through the philosophical essence, namely “Bṛāhma satyam jagatmithya jīvo barahmaiva na apāraḥ”, which means “Brahman of Upāṇisad is the only real one and all others are merely fantasy; Ātman is identical with Brahman, the One and Only, in which the scriptures give Him boundaries as the absolute existence-knowledge-happiness”.

The next philosophical proxy related to the existence of ātma, also known as Atmavidya, is the knowledge of God’s spark. The existence of the Ātman can be found in the text of the Kaṭha Upaniṣad, II.1.12-13 which says that “a creature as big as a thumb resides in the middle of the body. After understanding Him who is the past and future ruler, someone will not leave Him. That is the real circumstances (Radhakrishnan, 2008: 493)”’. Furthermore, the Kaṭha Upaniṣad identifies the factors causing Ātman to lose his divine status. Some of them are as follows:

a. Avidya, it is the inability to realize her original nature. In that circumstance, ātman has been blinded by material elements which are bound to worldly objects.

b. Discriminatory attitude, it is the lack of understanding in comprehending aspects of the unity of truth. For example, every human being certainly has a view of the truth. When truth is claimed as a gospel truth (claim of truth), then disputes and debates will emerge. Here is the beginning of human morality decline. Actually, the truth in the world is temporary because it is wrapped up by the essence of maya (delusion). This condition is described by the Katha Upanisad as the plurality of human mind (Katha Upanisad, II.1.14-15). If the atman is the manifestation of truth (which is certainly identical with Brahman), then indeed everything in the world is an embodiment of truth and truth is in everywhere. If all people understand that view, it will create tolerance in the midst of differences. This condition is called “unity of view” which is to understand the truth in every aspect of reality. According to Candogya Upanisad, III.14.1, it is mentioned as “sarvam kaluidam Brahman”, meaning “all of this is truly God”.

The subsequent divine philosophical discourse is related to mankind. The Katha Upanisad views the essence of man as a soul that is identical to God, as in the previous discussion which states that Atman and Brahman are similar. That thought leads to the unity of view by mankind themselves by looking at unity, necessity, and wholeness between immanent and transcendent atmans into all empirical forms. Therefore, the Katha Upanisad describes that mankind is the ‘perfect form’ of God. The definition of ‘perfect’ in this case does not legitimize that man is in the same element with God, but its definition relates to the integrity of the form as the reflection of the truth. This is because of the thoughts of the Katha Upanisad which led to the concept of monism or Advaita Vedanta. The Mahawakya contained in the Katha Upanisad text clearly says that “Etad vai tat” meaning “This really is that”. This perception then leads the view of mankind to unity without distinction.

The Katha Upanisad generally views humans as his decree, not as slaves to God’s servants. The Upanisad views humans as manifestations of God’s entity. The Katha Upanisad does not treat humans like horses who must be lured by the grass of heaven and threatened with the whip of hell to run according to the will of the coachman. As analogized by the Amir Hamzah’s poetry in Putra, ed. (2010: 11), it states that humans as God’s servants are similar to mice in the grip of cat’s claws. This Hamzah’s thoughts represents that human is those who are marginalized by God. Humans are the mere weak creature in the eyes of God. On the contrary, the Katha Upanisad views humans as the manifestation of God. Humans cannot achieve true essence because of ignorance or avidya. This is explained by the following text of the Katha Upanisad.

हन्ता चने मन्यतु ैहत्तूं चत्ततप जो मन्यतु ैहतम। \(\text{Hantā cen manyate hantuṁ hataṣ cen manyate hatam,}\) उभाँ तौ न विजानितो नाय चूंहलत न हन्यताः

hantā cen manyate hantuṁ hataṣ cen manyate hatam, ubhau tau na vijānīto nāyaṁ hanti na hanyate, (Katha Upanisad. I.2.19)
Translation:
If the murderer thinks that he killed or if the victim thinks that he was killed, then both of them did not understand. He did not kill nor be killed (Radhakrishnan, 2008: 479).

Based on the Katha Upanisad explanation above, the truth goes beyond the empirical elements. The text above implies that essential truth includes the existence of everything that exists. Avidya or ignorance is the main reason why humans are unable to understand the truth, even though the actual divine element is in the human soul. The divine element is considered as parallel to one’s own truth so that the Katha Upanisad text states Atman as the truth that exists in the human soul. The Katha Upanisad analogizes the human body as a horse carriage with its coachman and master. Atman, in this case, is considered to be the master of the inhabitants of the human body. Those domains of thought start from the following Katha Upanisad text.
ātmānaṁ rathinaṁ viddhi, śariraṁ ratham eva tu, buddhiṁ tu sāradhiṁ viddhi, manāḥ pragraham eva ca, indriyāṇi hayān āhur viṣayāṁs tesu gocarān, ātmendriya-manoyuktam bhoktety āhur manīṣiṇaḥ,
(Kaṭha Upaniṣad, I.3.3-4)
Translation:
Know the ātman as the master of the horse carriage; and the real body is the horse carriage; and know the buddhi as the coachman; and the mind is the control rope. The indria are the horse; the objects of indria are the path (which they will pass); (ātman) what relates to the body, indria, and mind is the connoisseur, said the wise man (Radhakrishnan, 2008: 484 - 485).

Based to the text above, the human body is like a horse carriage, where the ātman is the master of the body, the control rope of the horse is the mind, and the buddhi is the coachman of the horse carriage. In this analogy, the human body is like a complex organization. Whether you are a chairman or an ordinary worker, everyone in an organization must do its job well. In line with Maswinara, ed., (2008), he also states the same thing that humans consist of four important workers like an organization, namely the body, senses, mind, and intelligence. The chairman of the organization is the Ātma. Because intelligence is closely related to the ātma and the main source of strength/life, it is why the mind must follow the command of intelligence.

Furthermore, the Kaṭha Upaniṣad text implies that the three elements in the human body, namely indriya (senses), manas (mind), and buddhi (intellectuality), are the elements that are easily affected by external objects. According to Ranganathananda (2012: 108), he states that infection by external objects is like a poison that affects humans to be criminal, evil, or any form of derivation from negative. Crimes and evil that affect society derive from senses, mind, and intellectuality. The human body is driven by a sensory system (indria), which is actually the nervous system behind sensory organs. Indria is the first focus from which all other crimes come. The second is the mind (manas). Manas also catches infection during time flies, if humans are not careful. The last is buddhi, intelligence, or ability to distinguish, which distinguishes between what is right and what is wrong. Buddhi also has the possibility to be infected which may destroy its capacity to distinguish. Buddhi, in the end, may destroy human life when all of them are infected. If having been infected, then jiva cannot save Ātman in the human soul. Ātman becomes drowned in the material attachment.

The next discussion is a technique for achieving God’s consciousness called Adhyatma Yoga. In the previous explanation, it was explained that in order to understand and to live the teachings of divine philosophy, the mind must always be clean and calm. The relationship of Ātman and the body which is analogized with the horse carriage in the Kaṭha Upaniṣad text is similar to what in Bhagavadgītā. Manas or thought is the main determinant of human motion after buddhi. Only such thought can realize the truth of religious teachings. Moreover, the focus of the Yoga teachings is a way to control manas (mind) as well as possible so that human can achieve liberation.

At the dialectical level of the text, it seems that the Yoga Sutra Patanjali teachings have a close correlation with the Kaṭha Upaniṣad text. Yoga Sutra Patanjali emphasizes the aspects of practice, while the Kaṭha Upaniṣad emphasizes in the inner aspect of performing Yoga. According to Mohan (2006: 102), the Kaṭha Upaniṣad has the view that life is a search for identity. The method of performing Yoga is highlighted at the end of the Kaṭha Upaniṣad text. Moreover, the technique recommended by the Kaṭha Upaniṣad text is to always look inside, not outside. The recommendation to always look inside intends to slowly get to know the Ātman. The teachings then become Adhyātma Yoga, which is the teaching to know the true self.

parāñci khāni vyatṛṇat svayambhūs tasmāt parāñ paśyati nāntarātman; kaś cit dhīraḥ pratyag-ātmānam aikṣad āvṛtta-caksur amṛtatvam icchan, (Kaṭha Upaniṣad, II.1.1)
Translation:
Atman is not sought through the senses. The cause itself breaks the sense-opening out so that one usually looks outside than inside of him. However, some wise men seek eternal life with their eyes directed inside to see the ātman (Radhakrishnan, 2008: 489).

The text above is the beginning of the teachings of Adhyātma Yoga. It explains that liberation cannot be achieved through the senses. The text above seems to explain the two directions between the physical and spiritual worlds. The text above is talking about the direction of human view. The view of outside oneself is a physical view which tends to lead to attachment and suffering. Meanwhile, the view of inside oneself is a spiritual view which can lead to the path of peace, salvation, and liberation. The view of inside oneself is a quest to reach the consciousness of the Ātman (God within oneself). Ātman based on the text above is considered as an absolute principle, truth, and eternal principle.

The subsequent discussion is the process and method of yoga. The Kaṭha Upaniṣad text explains those topics as follows.

yadā sarve pramucyante kāmā ye'sya śrītāḥ. atha martyo'mṛto bhavaty atra brahma samaśnute. yadā sarve prabhidyante hrdayasyehe granthayeḥ, atha martyo'mṛto bhavaty etav adi granthayeḥ. śatam caikā ca hrdayasya nāsām tāsam mūrdhānam abhinihṣraikāḥ; tayordhvaṁ āyann amṛtatvam eti, viṣvan anyā utkramaṇe bhavanti.
(Kaṭha Upaniṣad, II.3.14-16)
Translation:
When all the desires in the human heart are removed, then mortal humans will become immortal and in this state, they have reached Brahma. When all the bonds are cut off, then mortal humans will become immortal. Thus, it is the far of the teachings. There are one hundred and one heart veins; one of them rises up to the crown. By going up through it, someone will be immortal; and others have the duty to go to other directions (Radhakrishnan, 2008: 502).

The text above describes the state of jīva which has been completely free from avidya (ignorance) or maya (worldliness) which binds the mind. The text above states that the mind can be completely free by eliminating the attachment element in human beings. The teachings of Yoga in the Kaṭha Upaniṣad text emphasize the level of Yama (control) and niyama (arrangement). The technique is to always get rid of false consciousness, namely the sense of self in the name of God. Selfishness is the ego of human beings.

The text of Katha Upaniṣad, II.3.14-16 hermeneutically shows that the aspect of faith and total submission to God is the main requirement for liberation. After that, the human soul is directed to eliminate all attachments originating from the mind by putting aside any desires that burden the spiritual journey. It is like a person who travels a long distance by much luggage which makes him difficult to walk. The luggage is all of his desire. By releasing all of the desires, the journey will become easier and the burden becomes lighter.

3. Implementation of the Divine Philosophy of the Katha Upaniṣad Text at the Sai Study Group Denpasar

a. Discourse on the Katha Upaniṣad Text and Sai Ideology

Before describing the implementation of the teachings of divine philosophy from the Katha Upaniṣad text, it would be better to discuss the relationship between the discourses in the Katha Upaniṣad text and the principles that underlie the movement of the SSG Denpasar. By uncovering the main reference or ideology of an organization, it will make the readers easier to see the relationship between both of them so that the reader may gain the main idea of this research. All activities in an organization are certainly from the process of instilling a value into organizational cultural patterns. A movement or an organization certainly has a principle or ideology which is made as the basic reference for action. Therefore, the relationship between the discourse of the Katha Upaniṣad text and Sai organizational ideology is important to discuss.

The implementation of the divine philosophy of the Katha Upaniṣad in the SSG Denpasar starts from the relationship between the signals in the Katha Upaniṣad text and Sai organizational ideology. According to Budiasa (2015: 112) about Sai ideology, it can be abstracted as a logic system from Bhagavan Sri Sathya Sai Baba with all of the representations from the depictions, myths, or concepts which underlie all activities in the SSG Denpasar.

According to Saussure (1857-1913), semiology is the study of signs in human social life including whatever the signs are and whatever the law which set the form of the sign is. Moreover, the concept of semiology according to Saussure used in this study is signifiant and signifié which are the component to form the signs and their roles cannot be separated from each other. Signifiant or signifier is everything captured by the human mind such as audio, visual, etc. Meanwhile, signifié or signified is the meaning or impression in the mind towards what is captured. Based on the Saussure’s theory, the researcher obtains the significance between the Sai ideology as the signifier and Katha Upaniṣad text as the signified. Furthermore, the relationship can be seen in the following table.

Based on the analysis table above, it shows a clear relationship between the Sai ideology concept as the signifier and the Katha Upanisad text as the signified. From the analysis, it has been shown that there is a relationship which forms a concept that connects them to aspects of implementation as outlined in the following scheme 1.

Scheme 1
The Modification of Saussure’s Signifier and Signified in the Implementation Process at the Sai Study Group Denpasar

!Diagram of Scheme 1

Where:
- Direct
- Indirect

Scheme 1 shows the relationship between signifier and signified in the implementation process at the SSG Denpasar. In the scheme above, it explains that the discourse in the Katha Upanisad text is internalized into the Sai ideology; and Sai ideology has a cluster of interpretation which is closely related to the Katha Upanisad text. The Sai ideology and the Katha Upanisad text are the sign of unity which ensouls all programs and activities at the SSG Denpasar. From the series of programs and activities at SSG Denpasar, they seem to have two types of implementations, namely as follow: first, implementation towards internalizing values into the individual or called transformation inside; second, the implementation of values brought to the social life as a form of self-realization, the applying values, and inspiring outside.

Scheme 2.1 shows the process of internalizing the divine values of the Katha Upanisad and how to implement the divine philosophy teachings. Moreover, the process also implies that the Katha Upanisad text is not directly applied as an organizational principle. However, through the signifier from Sai ideology which makes its own principle as the organizational principle, it seems to have a very coherent meaning similarity. This is the semantic relationship that encompasses Sai ideology with the divine philosophy of Katha Upanisad. The relationship of those signs seems to lead to the next process, namely the instilling symbolically the divine philosophy values by internalizing Sai ideology into the bhakta of Sai (followers of Sai Baba’s teachings).

The phenomenon of internalizing the divine philosophy values of the Katha Upanisad in the SSG Denpasar occurs symbolically. The process can be described using Herbert Blumer’s symbolic interactionism theory. As cited in Ambar (2017), Blumer states that there are three main principles of the symbolic interactionism, namely meaning, language, and thought. This premise will then lead to the concept of one’s ‘self’ and its socialization to the larger ‘community’, namely society. Those three Blumer’s premises are very compatible with the phenomenon in the SSG Denpasar. The symbolic interactionism describes the process of thought as conversations with his/her own self. It can be seen from the followers of the organization who are very enthusiastic in participating in various activities in the organization. Basically, the activities conducted at the SSG Denpasar are collegial collective and participatory. From the various activities conducted at the SSG Denpasar, the programs and activities which become the process of internalizing the divine philosophy values are:

1) Bhajan activities (singing sacred hymn). The bhajan activity is one of Sai spiritual disciplines which aim to recognize divinity within oneself. According to the perspective of symbolic interactionalism, through bhajan activities, the bhakta conduct inner communication within their self when the sacred hymn is sung. This tendency leads to the understanding of divine philosophy which is symbolically practiced through bhajan activities in Sai organization;

2) Meditation and sitting quietly. The practice of meditation applied in the Sai organization is light meditation. The bhakta always interpret light meditation as a process of self-realization, God’s communication process within oneself through love, and how they use that love to be shared through the visualization of light emitted through the mind during meditation process. The practice is in line with the Kaṭha Upaniṣad concept, namely as an action to understand. God within oneself and the unity with God’s element outside the self through the love principle;

3) Satsang activities / study circle. This activity is conducted by sitting in a circle then the moderator will convey a narration or topic to be discussed, after that, each participant expresses his opinion freely, and in the last, it is not concluded (concluded in each other’s hearts). Participants are not allowed to disprove or even argue other participants. Satsang / study circle is a unique activity at the Sai Study Group. Participants will indirectly learn about the nature of truth (understanding the truth is in everywhere, sarvam kaluidam brahman) which is the most important element in the Kaṭha Upaniṣad, and the bhakta of Sai learns to understand with a deep heart.

Those three activities above are actually activities to cultivate bhatin. Those activities generate a thought process in each bhakta of Sai as Blumer said as the process of communication with own mind. By noticing the phenomenon in the SSG Denpasar, it seems that the bhakta of Sai act or behave to others basically based on the interpretation they give to the other Denpasar, the bhakta aspects of life.

b. Implementation in Individual’s Life and Social Activities

The implementation of divine philosophy of the Kaṭha Upaniṣad can be described into two forms, namely: 1) implementation in the individual’s life; and 2) implementation in the social activities. This form is gained based on the description of Scheme 2.1 previously. Based on Scheme 2.1, the series of activities conducted by at the SSG Denpasar have implications for the transformation in an individual’s life and social society. The transformation is in values, attitudes, views, and lifestyle. The values that become spirit in each bhakta appear highly in line with the organization pillars instilled by Bhagavan Sri Sathya Sai Baba. Those values are as follow: 1) sathya (truth); 2) dharma (virtue); 3) shanti (peace); 4) prema (love); 5) ahimsa (without violence). These values are transformed into the attitudes and life views of the bhakta of Sai.

1) Implementation in Individual’s Life

The bhakta who practice Sai Baba’s teachings have characteristic behaviors as the result of the symbolic interactionism process with Sai discourses which has a semantic relationship with the Kaṭha Upaniṣad text (see Scheme 2.1). Moreover, the characteristic based on the implementation that can be described and then adopted as a life value in the individual life can be formulated into three main points, namely as follows:
a) Self-surrender

The self-surrender practice is a manifestation of in-depth bhakti. Bhakti is to love God or total surrender. Its implementation in an individual’s life can be carried out by perceiving that the self which is working is God, not the body. This practice is highly in line with the Kaṭha Upaniṣad view towards humans. According to the Kaṭha Upaniṣad, I.3.3, it is highly clear that the human body is like a horse carriage, where the ātman is the master, the mind is the control rope, and buddhi (intelligence) is the coachman. Ātman is the highest element of the body which is the part of God. The following is the excerpt of the text.

आत्मां तुंगविं तुंगविं। शवसर्वरिंम एं तात वतह तुंगतसारव। तुंगविं। मनः प्रग्रहम एँ च।
ātmānaṁ rathināṁ viddhi, śariram ratham eva tu, buddhim tu sāradhīṁ viddhi, manah pragrahāṁ eva ca (Kaṭha Upaniṣad, I.3.3)
Translation:
Know the Ātman as the master of the horse carriage and the reality is actually the horse carriage and know the buddhi as the coachman and the mind is actually the control rope (Radhakrishnan, 2008: 484).

b) Ego Control Practice

In the view of the bhakta of Sai, the ego is man’s greatest enemy. However, humans cannot be separated from the ego because, according to Sai Baba’s theory, he said that God + ego = human, and human – ego = God. This means that, in every activity in life, humans should always control the ego even though they cannot escape from the ego. According to the Kaṭha Upaniṣad text, the characteristics of egoism are caused by desires which are actually worldly mortal elements. By doing contemplation into oneself and reducing all forms of desire that chain life, humans can be free from a series of burdensome attachments.

yadā sarve pramucyante kāmā ye'sya śritāḥ. atha martyo'mrto bhavaty atra brahma samaśnute. yadā sarve prabhidyante hṛdayasye hṛdayasā yadṛṣṭaḥ, atha martyo'mrto bhavaty etāvad anuśānam. satam caikā ca hṛdayasya nādyas tāsām mūrdhānam abhinīśtaikā; tayordhvaṁ āyann amṛtatvam eti, viśvan anyü utkramaṇe bhavanti. (Kaṭha Upaniṣad, II.3.14-16)
Translation:
When all the desires in the human heart are removed, then mortal humans will become immortal and, in this state, they have reached Brahman. When all the bonds are cut off, then mortal humans will become immortal. Thus, it is the far of the teachings. There are one hundred and one heart veins; one of them rises up to the crown. By going up through it, someone will be immortal; and others have the duty to go to other directions (Radhakrishnan, 2008: 502).
Referring to the Kaṭha Upaniṣad text above, the strong analysis found from the significance recognition of the bhakta who practiced Sai teachings showed that there are similarities in term of concepts with the discourse in the Kaṭha Upaniṣad, II.3.14-16. The text above explains that desire is a product of the ego which then becomes an attitude of egoism. Egoism is a bond that chains people. If all the characteristics of egoism are cut off, then humans will achieve liberation from the bonds of life. This means that, in this life, humans should always realize the God within their self through self-control and maintaining the purity of the heart which is always addressed to God. Therefore, the bhakta of Sai view themselves as instruments of God, and then realize their essence as part of God (Ātman). If the view of life is well applied, it will transform into good attitude in which every action taken will reflect the divine characteristics.

c) Doing seva (service)

Seva is a very common thing for the bhakta of Sai. Seva comes from Sanskrit terminology which means selfless service. In local terms, in Bali, it is often called ngayah. According to Roof (2013: 325), service is a gift of love. There is an informant who attracted the researcher’s attention. He is Sang Putu Adiyasa. Following is the excerpt of the interview with him.

“Service is a spiritual discipline in this stage of life. Hands that work are better than the mouth that speaks. The purpose of the seva is to realize the svami teaching in which outside of us is also God (Sang Putu Adiyasa, Interview on August 12th, 2018).”

Based on the statement above, the informant considers seva as a form of a very important spiritual practice that must be carried out. For him, seva or service aims to realize the presence of Ātman in every living entity. In other words, he views everything as a manifestation of God. In the Kaṭha Upaniṣad, it is explained that Ātman is in every manifestation of human and all living things. The statement of the informant above has represented the Kaṭha Upaniṣad teachings. The text of Kaṭha Upaniṣad, I.3.1 explicitly says that God permeates all of his creations.

2) Implementation in the External Program of the Organization Organizational activities of the SSG Denpasar cannot be separated from social activities. As mandated by SSGI and also the Sai International organization, organizational activities must cover three aspects, namely spirituality, education, and service. The social activities conducted at the SSG Denpasar are the concrete form of those service aspects. The implementation of the Kaṭha Upaniṣad teachings in the external program of the organization encompasses two major activities, namely: a) social service activities (sociocare); and b) human values education (educare).

The social service activities (sociocare) are usually parallelized with the anniversary of Bhagavan Sri Sathya Sai Baba as a dedication to Sath Guru celebrated every November 23rd. One of the social activities conducted routinely is free health services and blood donors. According to Arya Pramana, the blood donors aim to train the sensitivity and empathy to those who need help. The following are the excerpt of the interview.

“Blood donors have the goal to train of being sensitive to others. Swami taught that humans should always give help to people in need. In social activities, we can understand that what we give is also the manifestation of Ātman (Arya Pramana, Interview on August 30th, 2018).”
Based on the informant’s statement above, it seems that the bhakta of Sai understand the essence of the divine philosophy of the Kaṭha Upaniṣad. The statement above indicates the implementation of the Kaṭha Upaniṣad teachings. The life view of the bhakta of Sai is to do service as a spiritual exercise. For them, spirituality is not something which refers to supernaturalism, but it is the essence, spirit, and basic thing of a rite. Love for all (without discriminating any groups) is a spiritual character. They have opinions that by serving others, someone has trained the love in him as a form of spiritual awareness in which the essence of all humans is similar. In the end, the purpose of doing selfless service is to train someone’s awareness of bhatin. It is the essence of the divine philosophy of the Kaṭha Upaniṣad.

Besides social-health service activities, the SSG Denpasar also conducts services in the field of educare for children in the form of human values education. The human values education are parts of the educare activities at the SSG Denpasar. The educare are usually conducted with other social activities such as free medication, etc. Furthermore, Sai ideology indeed mandates the Sai organizations to conduct programs that can reflect the character of pure budhi based on human values principles. According to Roof, (2013), Sai Baba has words for education namely “The end of education is the character” which means that the purpose of education is not just to make people clever cognitively but to make people clever in the aspect of morality. Furthermore, the views of the management of the SSG Denpasar towards educational goals also have a relationship that cannot be separated from that kind of character. In other words, morality is the basic thing of spirituality.

The Kaṭha Upaniṣad also has a moral message, namely “the true self (Ātman) is the power source of self”. According to Kaṭha Upaniṣad, I.2.18-19, I.3.14, and II.1.14-15, it implicitly explains that attachment, ignorance, and intolerance are weaknesses of self which cause humans to lose their main character. According to Sai Baba, the character is love, while according to Kaṭha Upaniṣad, the character is Ātman. Sai Baba in Sathya Sai Book Trust (1970) has an opinion that “Love is God, where there is love, there will be God there”. Therefore, ‘Love’, ‘God’, and ‘Ātman’ are actually parallel concepts. The alignment of the concept also has a relationship with the educare activities conducted at the SSG Denpasar. The educare conducted at the SSG Denpasar has a purpose to share love with fellow human beings. In addition, the purpose is in line with the following Kaṭha Upaniṣad text.

उत्तिष्ठता जागरता प्राप्या वरान निबोध्हता, क्षुरास्या धाराना निषिद्ध दुरत्यया, दुरगम पथास तत्कवयो वादानि।

(Kaṭha Upaniṣad, I.3.14)
Translation:
Stand up, wake up, after getting what you ask for, you must understand it. Sharp as a knife and difficult to cross, tough to be guided are that road. It is what was said by the rsi (Radhakrishnan, 2008: 452).

The mantra above implies that humans must not become weak. The text above means that humans must immediately find their true self and understand that the body is only an instrument. Through the spirit of love, the educare activities conducted at the SSG Denpasar are like raising weak souls to immediately realize their virtues.

Humans have great potential inside their self. The text of the Kaṭha Upaniṣad I.3.14 above is interpreted as “weakness is death, strength is life”. If humans are not able to explore the potential inside their self, then they actually have died in this life. Humans should use all of their potential to realize the divinity within their self. The service conducted at the SSG Denpasar is not only to make their lives become more meaningful but also to more focus on achieving the true character of human being, namely realizing the God presence. Descartes also state Cogito Ergo Sum (I think then I exist). In that context, a person who is fully aware of his true self will become truly exist (read: life) in this life.

CONCLUSION

All forms of activities conducted at the SSG Denpasar are actually based on the teachings of Sath Guru Bhagavan Sri Sathy Sai Baba with various representations of the Vedic scriptures. Moreover, activities conducted at the SSG Denpasar certainly not only imply the teachings of the Kaṭha Upaniṣad alone but also from other Upanishads. Although the aspects of their activities do not directly refer to or mention the Vedic teachings as the source, the implementation shows clearly the element of Vedic teachings. It is verified by the research and interviews which had been conducted. There is quite a lot of the bhakta of Sai who had never read the Kaṭha Upaniṣad scripture and even touched the scripture. However, when explored by an in-depth interview, the bhakta of Sai highly understand the teachings of Sai Baba which is in line with the Kaṭha Upaniṣad.
